ART2602C Intro to Digital Media

description

This project was centered around Net.Art and designing a series of web pages that consisted of collages related to a 6-8 word poem that was randomly generated. From there, links were formed among the collages that created various paths to other the pages within the series. A launch page was also put together in our portfolios, so that we could have a link to it for future use.

artist's statement

For this project, I was able to form the following poem: “both real and society marketer Michael Jordan. no self checkout.” I wanted to make sure throughout all five of my collages/web pages that each part of the poem was signified in some way. To do so, I put something related back to Michael Jordan whether it was shoes, an actual basketball, or a basketball player, in each thumbnail. I also used words to actually spell out what the poem was or to interject just some parts of the poem to have a direct connection. In addition, the images I found were usually quite literal when representing the poem, while others symbolized the words, which helped break up the overall collages. For the links, I wanted to have multiple paths instead of just one to make it more interesting. I used my various images as the links as well, so that it was harder and more discreet as to where to different paths were.

Lastly, I strived to make each thumbnail unique within themselves but still look similar to the others for some unity. Most of the images that are used are the same except in various forms of the words, which helped tie them all together.

I really enjoyed this project and being able to kind of create a game with the webpages/collages. I am starting to love coding too because there are so many cool things that you can do with it like this project and you can control many different things to make it how you want.

The only thing that I would have done different for this project was to make the links more complicated and to make more pages so there are more paths. I would have also made the images a little more complex than they are to make it more fun. This project also helped me get more comfortable with photoshop and taught me how to use the clipboard tool when creating copying an image onto a new canvas. I did not know how to do that before.

I am looking forward to our next project and love that this class has shown me so much so far that art comes in many different forms.
